Historic Berlin meets the Spirit of the Ages

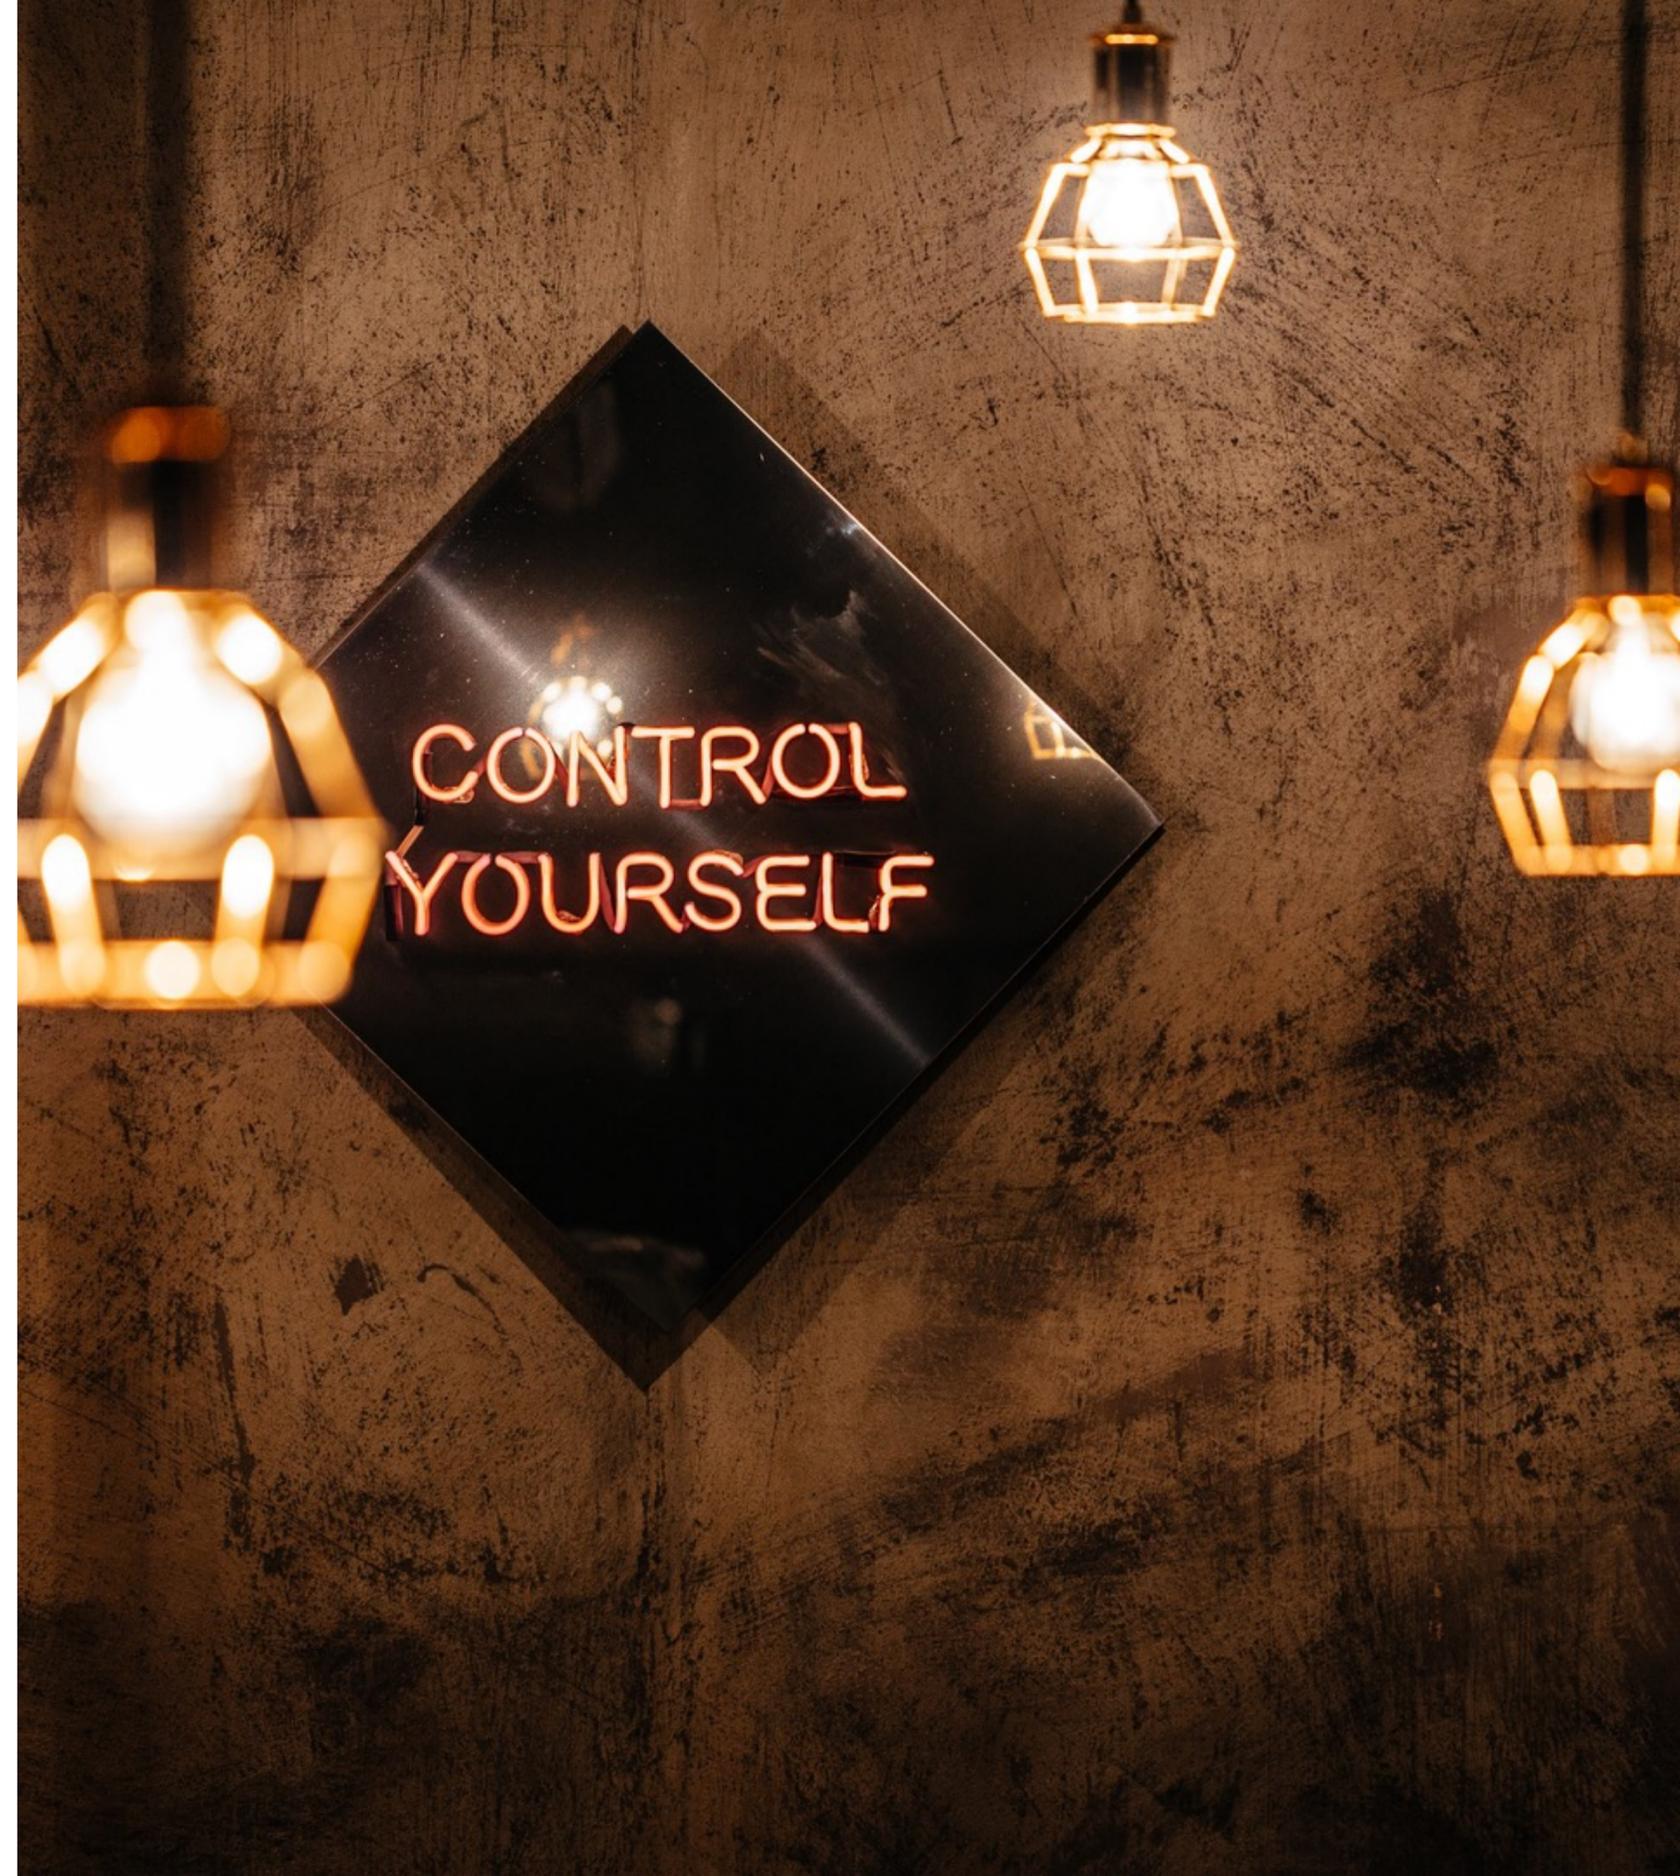

The best of both worlds: a place where one can wine and dine upstairs before spending the night in a luxurious bed, or choose to experience the pulse of the city with the latest beats in Bricks underground.

The Gendarmenmarkt has been an architectural ensemble in the middle of Berlin's historical center since the 17th century. In close proximity to Friedrichstrasse, the Schauspielhaus, and both the German and French cathedrals, the Gendarmenmarkt continues to signify an integral cultural part of Berlin's city center.

Covering an area of roughly 3.3 hectares, the Gendarmenmarkt is considered one of the nicest squares in Berlin, welcoming millions of tourists a year. Countless Cafés, Restaurants, boutique shops and Hotels line the square and offer something for everyone.

It should come to no surprise then, that the Hilton Group opened their flagship Hotel Hilton Berlin right here in this historical square in 1991.

Berlin is a city of contrasts, so it was not unusual that a club such as BRICKS would open its doors underneath the glamour of a luxury hotel in November of 2015. Conceptualized and restored by internationally renowned architects studio karhard, BRICKS boasts a purist urban ambience which merges harmoniously with trendy industrial design details in a progressive yet comfortable atmosphere.

The Heart of the City

With its high regard for design and quality of service, BRICKS offers a positive influence on the rhythm of Berlin lifestyle.

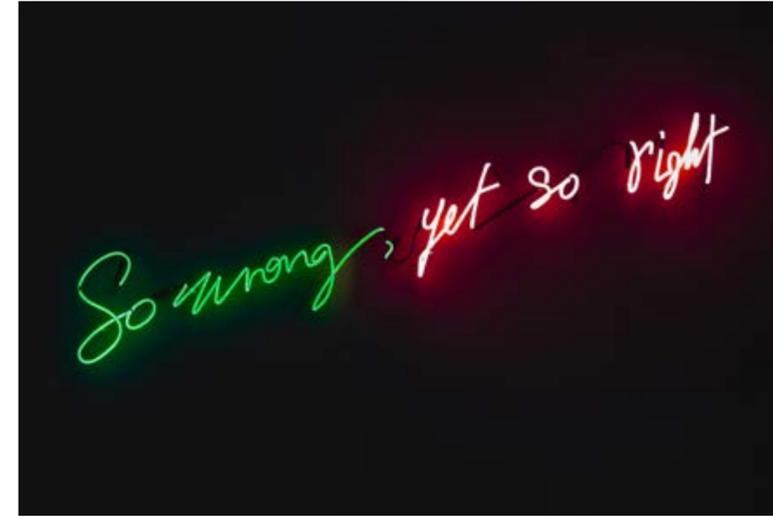

BRICKS covers an area of roughly 900 square metres and can hold anywhere between 50 to 1200 guests. This well designed space and its urban ambiance allows for a wide array of diver events. Split up into three main areas of varying sizes, and equipped with a unique concert style setting, this location guarantees the highest flexibility and maximum variety.

The absolute highlight of this venue is the main floor which hosts two bars, a DJ area, several lounge areas and a center stage with a plug & play option for bands.

Furthermore, there is an impressive 400 speaker professional L-Acoustic bass sound system; a system which is usually used by the likes of Rammstein, Seeed, Robbie Williams or David Guetta.

This unique combination of technology allows guests to be able to talk to each other in the club, and even on the dancefloor, regardless of how high the music's volume is. A second club room is also outfitted with its own bar, a DJ area, and a separate sound system. Last but not least, the Fellini Lounge offers exclusivity in an independent area with private lounges and a full kitchen.

With her neon-light artworks the contemporary artist Olivia Steele creates a special contrast in an urban ambience.

Bar culture at the highest level meets the taste of the guests with a variety of trendy drinks.

Characteristic of the urban ambience and casual design, are concrete and metal optics paired with leather and fabric patterns.
